MAUNA LOA VOLCANO A FIERY FURNACE

HOOPULOA HAWAIIAN TOWN WIPED OUT OF EXISTENCE

A Flood of Molten Rock pouring Out From the Crater Struck the Sea Sunday Morning, Causing the Ocean To Boil Furiously, the Eruption Is One of the Grandest Sights Imaginable--From the Sea, the Whole Earth Seems To Be On Fire.

The village of Hoopuloo, on the southwest shore of the island of Hawaii, was destroyed Sunday morning by an avalanche of lava, that burst from the volcano Mauna Loa.

From 10 to 15 homes were engulfed, but there is no report as to what became of the inhabitants.

A flood of molten rock pouring from the crater struck the sea at 6:21 o'clock Sunday morning, starting the water boiling several hundred feet out at sea.

Plunging into the water south of Hoopuloo, the lava turned in the direction of Kona, filling the bay and burying the landing and from 10 to 15 homes located in the vicinity.

All houses and the wharf at Hoopuloo were engulfed under 50 feet of lava, the postoffice being the last building to go. It burst into flames at 8:30 a. m.

As the steam of lava, which flowed from an 8,000 foot level in approximately four days, approached the ocean Sunday afternoon it split into two branches. Eight hundred feet from water one stream turned toward Hoopuloo and the other started in the direction of Milolii.

Old Hawaiian Kahunas started incantations in the ancient form of appeal to Pele (Hawaiian goddess associated with the volcano Kilauea) not to destroy their homes.

Their appeal failed to stop the flow. A steady onrush of lava continued its course of destruction.

Army airplanes arrived a few hours after the village was destroyed, but were unable to locate the flow definitely because of the dense steam and smoke.

The aviators reported the heat was intense at an elevation of 3,000 feet. Huge clouds of steam hung over the ocean, rising to a height of several hundred feet. As the lava struck the water tremendous rockets of steam shot into the air, showering the entire region about the bay.

The heat of the superheated flow had been hovering above the village for more than 36 hours.

Sunday night a heavy flow from the mountain stirred the great pile of cooling slag into action and the giant moved forward over the village and into the ocean.

The village of Milolii is believed to be safe.

Hoopuloo was one of the few typically Hawaiian villages remaining in the islands. It comprises a cluster of from 10 to 15 homes of the old Hawaiian style, numbering a population of approximately 100 persons.

Several hundred passengers aboard steamer Haleakala, Island of Hawaii gazed in awe while the great volcano, Mauna Loa, rising into the clouds from the island of Hawaii, belched forth a fiery river of lava. As the vessel cruised along the south coast, the flow down the slopes of the mountain presented a most gorgeous picture.

Viewed from the ocean the upper half of the flow appeared to be a molten river, which burst at different points into lakes of fire, sending up an incandescent glow of tremendous beauty.

At 3 o'clock Sunday morning a new outbreak appeared on the Kau side of the mountain, two distinct actions being visible.

A damp cloth that has been wrung almost dry will remove the sugar marks from the mahogany table. But put a little furniture polish on the table afterward. You can use a chamomile to polish the walnut furniture, but a regular polish would really be best.

EVANGELISTIC SERVICES AT CALVARY END

Last Meeting of Series This Evening at 7:15--Everybody is Invited.

A wonderful sermon was delivered by Rev. Charles A. Glass at Calvary Evangelical church Sunday morning, on "The Grand Purpose to be Kept in View."

"Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

This is a rule by which we should seek to be governed. I want to give you three reasons this morning why we should earnestly seek to live by this rule. In the first place because the individual who is careless or indifferent even to the slightest degree will fail to live that kind of life that God would have lived and yet you know that the age in which we live is an age of indifference with reference to spiritual things and this awful spirit of indifference has crept within the very pales of the church.

The individual who will not be governed by this rule will find two or three things necessary. He will find it necessary very often to make a self-examination.

Then you will find it very, very necessary to consult the "Guide Book." We must get acquainted with the chart. You know what I mean, don't you? I mean the Bible. There are three means by which we will be wonderfully helped in our lives. The first is by personal reading. Oh, that we might be daily readers of His word. We should be in a Sunday school class to become acquainted with God's word. It is a wonderful means to help us understand the Bible.

The greatest means by which any one will understand what God's word really teaches; it is thru the preached word. The preaching service is the main service of the church. God has chosen men to whom He has spoken and made them realize that they must lay aside other ambitions and that their business life should be preaching, and that He would give them messages He wants His people to hear.

Then the individual who will be governed by this rule will find it necessary to earnestly, anxiously and frequently be engaged in prayer. You will never amount to anything until you are a praying person. Do you have family prayer? Your home will never be the kind of home God would have it be unless you have family prayer.

Let us try to be living examples of what God's people really should be. We should adopt this as a rule by which to be governed because the individual who lives according to this rule will compel all who know him, and all who watches him, to know that the grace of God is true.

Rev. Glass will be with us only tonight. He will conduct a special service of story and song. The first part of the program will be composed of musical numbers, both vocal and instrumental, piano and violin. The latter part of the evening he will give a lecture "Light in the Darkness" which is an interesting and helpful story of his life. Everybody come at 7:15 to the Evangelical church.

TONSILS REMOVED.

Sherman Furniss underwent an operation for the removal of his tonsils Tuesday, April 6. The operation was performed by Dr. C. G. Stewart, assisted by Dr. F. E. Ginder.

Single Dish Dinners Become Popular With the Housewife

One-dish dinners have suddenly loomed into prominence with the housewife. The idea of single-dish dinners is not new. They have been recognized institutions since Eve lived in the Garden of Eden. The modern woman has merely revived an old practice.

Historically, the first single-dish repast was the apple Adam ate. According to Charles Lamb, one of the most famous one-dish dinners was provided back in prehistoric times when fire attacked the hut of a primitive gentleman and provided roast pig.

Whether this be true or not, the one-dish dinner is a great time saver for the housewife. Naturally, however, the home manager requires even more variety in her single-dish dinners than she does in her regular meals. It was with the idea of assisting her in this connection that the following carefully tested recipes were evolved:

Tuna Fish Pie

1 twelve ounce can tuna fish
1 cup celery cut in fine pieces
1 cup diced potato
3 hard cooked eggs
1 slice onion
5 tsp. flour
4 tsp. butter
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
1½ cups water
2 chicken bouillon cubes
½ cup evaporated milk

Put butter and onion in a sauce pan and cook for two minutes. Add the flour, salt, pepper, water, and bouillon cubes. Stir until sauce boils and add the evaporated milk. Put into a buttered casserole alternating with tuna fish, celery, potato and hard cooked eggs, sliced. Cover with tiny, uncooked baking powder biscuits and bake in a 425° F. oven for fifteen to twenty minutes.

Ham a la Breck

1 pint cooked macaroni
1 cup cold ham, finely chopped
¼ cup evaporated milk diluted with 1 tsp. mustard
¼ cup water
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. onion juice
1 tsp. mustard

Cover bottom of a buttered baking dish with a layer of cooked macaroni. Cover with finely chopped ham and repeat. Mix diluted milk with slightly beaten eggs, salt, pepper, onion juice and mustard and pour over ham and macaroni. Bake in a 350° F. oven until firm. Lamb, beef, or chicken may be used instead of the ham.

Lima Beans with Vegetables

2 cups dried lima beans
1 tsp. salt
2 tsp. pepper
2 inch cube fat salt pork
1 small onion, sliced
1 cup carrots, cubed
½ cup potatoes, cubed
2 tsp. butter
3 cups water

Soak beans over night in cold water; drain, put in bean pot and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Chop salt pork and cook in a frying pan until fat is tried out, add onion, carrots and potatoes and stir constantly until vegetables are delicately browned. Add to beans, and add butter and water. Cook in a 350° F. oven until beans are tender. Add more water if it boils away.

Scalloped Meat and Spinach

3 tsp. melted butter
2 tsp. flour
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. pepper
¼ cup evaporated milk
1 pint cooked spinach
1 cup buttered crumbs
¼ cup evaporated milk diluted with ¼ cup chicken or meat stock
1 pint cooked chicken

Melt butter, add flour, salt, pepper, and diluted milk. Stir until mass boils, then add the ¼ cup of evaporated milk and stir until boiling point is reached. Into a buttered casserole put a layer of cooked spinach, then a layer of cooked chicken cut in medium-sized pieces. Cover with the milk sauce. Repeat and cover with buttered crumbs. Bake until heated through and crumbs are brown.

Meat Pie with Potato Crust

1 cup cooked meat, diced
¼ cup celery
½ cup evaporated milk diluted with ¼ cup water
1 tsp. evaporated milk
1 tsp. butter
1½ tsp. flour
2 cups mashed potato
1 egg yolk
Salt
Pepper

Make a white sauce of the butter, flour and diluted milk. Combine the meat, celery, and white sauce, add seasonings, and pour into a shallow baking dish. Spread potato over the mixture. Brush surface of potato with egg yolk diluted with 1 tsp. evaporated milk. Bake in a hot oven until heated through and a delicate brown.

Chow Mien

1 lb. noodles
½ cup celery (meat or chicken)
1 young onion
1 egg beaten
1 tsp. Chinese Sauce
1 tsp. salt
Fat for frying noodles
¼ cup stock (meat or chicken)
¼ cup bamboo shoots
½ lb. raw pork or chicken
¼ cup drippings
1 tsp. flour

Cut bamboo shoots, onion, and celery into long threads and meat or chicken into slender strips. Fry egg in oiled pan and cut into long strips. Place noodles on a rack of the steamer, sprinkle with 2 tsp. oil, cover and let steam for 15 minutes. Lift carefully with a fork to separate well. Spread on a platter to cool, then fry in hot fat until crisp. Drain well and place on a hot platter. Have ready the other ingredients, which have been prepared in the following way. Fry the pork gently without browning in the drippings for about 15 minutes. Stir occasionally. Add the celery, bamboo shoots, salt, and Chinese sauce. Cover and let steam for 15 minutes. Mix the flour with the stock and pour over the vegetables and meat, add more water if necessary. Cook two minutes and spread over the hot fried noodles and decorate the top with egg strips.

Scalloped Ham and Potatoes

1 slice ham, two inches thick
2 cups potatoes, pared and thinly sliced
½ cup evaporated milk diluted with ¼ cup water

Remove outside edge of fat from ham. Cut fat in small pieces and put in the bottom of a casserole. Lay ham on bottom, then pile potatoes on top. Pour enough diluted milk over to be seen through the potatoes. Cover and bake slowly about one and one-half hours in a 300° F. oven.

Choosing the Right Bedroom Colors

By Capitola W. Ashworth

MUCH thought and care should be expended upon the decoration of bedrooms. For it is not an easy task to achieve a setting which is quietly restful without being depressing, and at the same time cheerful without being too gay. It is to our sleeping-rooms that we retire in search of repose and relaxation. To obtain those results, the nerves should not be excited by brilliant color nor the spirits lowered by a sombre environment.

Also, a bedroom should express to a certain extent the personality which is to occupy it. There should always, for instance, be a marked distinction between the scheme of decoration planned for a man's room, and that which is to serve the purpose of a feminine occupant. Simplicity in furnishings and an appearance of solid comfort should characterize the man's bedroom, while lady's boudoir may indulge in more delicate fabrics and a greater daintiness of color and design.

Two bedrooms typically masculine are shown in the upper left and lower right-hand corners of the accompanying illustration. As will be observed, the furniture is plain and substantial, built for use and comfort. A cheerful color-scheme is appropriate in these rooms. In the first, the large wicker chair is painted a Chinese red, and the rest of the furniture light tan decorated with lines of Chinese red. The cushions of the chair are covered with tan cretonne figured in black and Chinese red. The walls of this room are painted a pale, quiet tan, and the woodwork brown. In the second of the men's bedrooms, the wicker armchair, painted a deep, French blue, goes well with the beautifully finished mahogany furniture, in a setting of pale grey walls, mahogany-finished doors and woodwork. In the oval, hooked rug on the painted floor, blue is the predominating color. Brighter colors in the lampshade give a touch of warmth.

Furniture painted in the lovely pastel shades is suitable for women's bedrooms. That in the upper right-hand picture is painted orchid, with stencil design in turquoise blue; while the stuffed armchair is covered with flowered chintz in the same colors. The built-in bookcases match the woodwork, probably cream or white.

The furniture in the other feminine bedroom is painted blue and decorated with narrow gold stripes. The paneled walls are painted a paler blue and cream. Paint is not only the most sanitary finish for bedroom walls and floors, but also the most effective background for furniture, draperies and pictures.

Spraying Trees in Bloom Harms Bees

Little Insects Necessary for Pollination.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When spraying fruit trees, care should be taken to do the work at a time when there is the least danger of poisoning the honeybees which visit the blossoms and which are very necessary for the pollination of the flowers, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Spraying fruit trees while in full bloom with arsenicals is particularly injurious to bees, according to tests which have been completed recently by the bureau of entomology.

Of course the beekeeper does not want his bees poisoned, says the department, because as a result his honey crop is reduced. The subject should be of even more interest, however, to fruit growers because with the loss of the honeybees they lose the most effective means of pollination in their orchards. In this respect the beekeeper, the fruit grower, and in fact everyone is benefited by honeybees.

The effect of arsenical sprays on the mortality of honeybees has long been debated, but only a few systematic investigations have been made to aid in settling the dispute. In the hope of answering definitely some of the questions so long debated, these tests were conducted. While they are limited in their scope, they do enable the department to make some recommendations.

Spraying apple trees during full bloom is not recommended because the codling moth can be as well controlled by spraying when 90 per cent of the petals have fallen, and because spraying when the trees are in bloom is injurious to insect pollinators.

Acid Phosphate Speeds Up Tomato Crop Growth

It has been found by the New Hampshire experiment station that acid phosphate speeds up the tomato crop materially, and makes it possible to beat the frost. They have used from five hundred pounds to fifteen hundred pounds of acid phosphate to the acre. In addition to twenty tons of manure, and the acid phosphate has advanced the peak of the crop better than manure alone, or other chemical fertilizers. According to the reports the bulk of the crop has matured from one to two weeks earlier on the acid phosphate plot.

Apparently the acid phosphate causes rapid early growth, and as a result of this a much larger number of blossom clusters, blossoms, and fruit is produced early. There is apparently no difference in the rapidity of the development of the fruit from the time the blossoms are formed until ripening occurs, but the fact that there is blossom in abundance from a week to two weeks earlier is sufficient to enable the grower to get the majority of the tomatoes off the vines before frost.

It will not cost much to treat some of your tomatoes with the acid phosphate, and it might work out to great advantage.

Hogging Off Field Peas and Corn Is Profitable

Hogging-off trials resulted in returns of $18.65 per acre from Canadian field peas and $37.76 per acre from corn last year at the Edgeley substation, according to a report made by Superintendent O. A. Thompson to P. F. Trowbridge, director of the North Dakota experiment station. The return was considered especially good in view of the fact that the field peas were badly damaged by unfavorable weather during May and June.

The average daily gain per hog for 129 hogs was 1.16 pounds on the peas, 6.22 acres furnishing pasture for eight days. The hogs were then turned in a ten-acre corn field, where they made a daily average gain of 1.7 pounds each for 17 days. The value of the gains was computed at 10 cents per pound.

FARM FACTS

Give the birds protection; they will repay you next summer.

Practice crop rotation to hold down the danger of scab and other potato diseases.

Start mixing poultry droppings with gypsum, an excellent fertilizer and a convenient way of handling it.

It is none too early to look around for a supply of bean poles. They are always hard to locate when you need them.

It is well occasionally to stir up the mulch applied to tender plants. This generally loses its value if it becomes too compact.

Two decades ago the question was how to make two blades grow where one grew before; today the problem is what to do with the extra blade.

Most farming machinery goes to the scrap heap after it has been used only 80 to 100 days, while railroads use a locomotive 25 years or more.

The high price of posts makes the catalpa groves more valuable than ever anticipated. And it is surprising how rapidly the small catalpa trees grow into post size.

Woolen Materials
for New Garments*Chic Frocks and Wraps Are Built of Dainty Lightweight Weaves.

When spring comes and all things are new, women begin the ever-diverting search for fresh inspiration in dress. It is not always simple to discover novelty, nor is the response to one's efforts always immediate. This is particularly evident when a radical change in styles is just finding adjustment.

Many of the most successful styles of the present season, writes a fashion authority in the New York Times, are adaptations of extremes brought out previously. There is little that is startlingly different in line, but colors and materials are new.

Two years ago women were saying that they could not find a woolen dress in New York, meaning, of course, one of authoritative style. The craze for thin fabrics, crepes, voiles and so on was at its height. Paris was seeking to achieve the supple and lithe silhouette with a certain fragile daintiness, and America followed blindly.

Gradually American appreciation of the fitness of things called for wool for autumn, winter and spring and simultaneously the French couturiers swung over to the same conviction in creating gowns, suits and wraps for out-of-doors. There is always a certain demand for English materials for sports wear, travel and general utility, but it is too limited and individual to have any bearing upon the general trend of fashions. A compromise between these and the flimsy stuffs was sought, and this season it is to be found in the great variety of beautiful products of the looms.

Many Costumes Offered.

Parisian fashion artists have never before offered so many costumes for the street, for sports and informal wear, coats, capes and odd garments made of woolen or part woolen materials. Quantities of frocks and wraps are built of the newest weaves, which are much lighter in weight than heretofore, but nevertheless wool. Tweed is tremendously popular for suits and top coats and for separate skirts. Nothing is more satisfying for sports clothes. Molyneux and Redfern are doing some stunning things in tweed, which is shown this season in entirely new surfaces, particularly in color. These are quite different from the natural and neutral shades in the wool with which we have long been familiar.

Lanvin, stepping wide of her favorite territory, picture costumes, has conceived a striking ensemble for early spring that will find many friends among the elite on this side of the water. The material is tweed in one of the latest patterns, a diagonal stripe in brown and white zig-zag lines. It has a plain wrap-around skirt and full, straight coat, seven-eighths length. Navy blue velvet is used for the jumper and for three large buttons that trim one side of the skirt. Bands of skunk fur trim the collar and cuffs.

Another decorative pattern in tweed has a geometric background, with stripes wide apart. Lanvin shows it in a swaggy little two-piece suit. The double-breasted hip length jacket, made of this, is to be worn with a skirt of finely plaited black wool rep. Reps in many degrees of weight, size of rib, color and quality, brought out last season and presented in delightful variants by American manufacturers, are much liked by French designers. One model delightfully adapted to early spring is a one-piece frock of black rep. It has the general character of the coat-dress, so popular two seasons ago and here and there of a detail to bring it up to the minute. From one shoulder to the hem this particular design fastens in a straight line, broken only at one point below the waist by a battle-ment fastening, below which the skirt flares at one side. A scarf is draped around the neck to form the collar. It is caught on one shoulder with a gilded flower. Narrow gilt braid is used to finish the edge of the entire frock.

This use of braid in metal, colored silk or wool is fashionable. It gives a smart finish to any of these simply tailored woolen or worsted frocks. A particularly popular finish is a narrow strip of gilt or silver leather, added in the manner of braid on collar and cuffs, as a belt or to join and outline any of the new spring frocks and informal coats.

Kasha Is Liked.

Another material established in past seasons is kasha. It improves on acquaintance, because of the fine texture of the latest weaves. In some of the best styles shown from both French and American designers kasha is combined with another material. Coats for motoring and general sports wear are made of kasha, self lined.

Covert, twill and kasha jersey are among the important weaves from domestic looms, also a few of the "English" mixtures. These are the fabrics best liked for frocks and suits. For capes, top coats and cape coats, except in models for evening and more elaborate dress, there are cashmere and homespun in square patterns, rough woolens, "nubbed" tweeds, stripes, plaits and checks.

What is known as the occasional garment is shown in many interesting models. Much that is chic and fascinating is included in the little dress described as the jumper frock. This phase of the fashionable costume is not disdained by the most illustrious among the couturiers. They have entertained themselves by designing many that are original and artistic. One done by Paul Poiret has made a decided "hit" on the Riviera. It is a naive affair of blue kasha toile with a finely plaited skirt and a slip-on jumper that is severely plain and high at the neck, with long sleeves. It is finished with clusters of fine tucks on the collar, cuffs, shoulders and around the bottom.

Another French creator has made a stunning little smoking jacket of white suede. It meets high at the neck, and has no fastening down the front except three large buttons below the waist. It is cut straight in line, with three pockets, and is worn with a short flaring skirt of white flannel. A narrow belt of colored suede, attached at each side of the coat, buckles in the center of the back. Lanvin goes in for these odd jumpers and unusual combinations. Her favorite is the sleeveless jumper, with kilt skirt and large silk tie.

Of the new materials, frisca is most prominent. Some of the most stylish frocks and ensembles worn at the southern resorts are made of this material. A charming model that will have an appeal for summer in the country is a cape costume of frisca. The simple frock has a two-tiered skirt, simple, untrimmed blouse with bateau neck, and a three-quarter circular cape. Black velvet ribbon forms the belt and ties the cape at the throat. This is an exception in the season's color catalogue, since white is considered less fashionable than the pastel shades, for elaborate dress, and the richer tones, for tailored clothes.

The novelty in wool patterns is the check. The traditional check in black and white is much used and is always smart. But the newest checks are small and irregular, producing an effect of subtlety in their softly blended colors. Red, brown and ivory are woven together in equal spaces. In one, quite different, beige, blue and scarlet are spaced to produce oblong bars, the blue appearing to form a stripe. A small geometric pattern woven in gray and black is original and particularly attractive.

In recent exhibitions of American made silks the most admired of all the new patterns were the small polka dots. Of these the choicest were in black and white. All of this proves the enduring popularity of black and white. One of the most exclusive shops in New York is showing a great deal of blue.

The Chinese Flapper

The Chinese flapper is not as attractive as the term might seem to imply for her garb is a hybrid arrangement which is neither one thing or the other. She has positively discarded the trousers which have been the traditional garb for centuries and wears instead a long full skirt. The Chinese headdress is retained, but she is able to put on any of the other features of the Occidental girl that she can obtain. The result is a garbled appearance which is sometimes ridiculous.

A Chest for the Bathroom

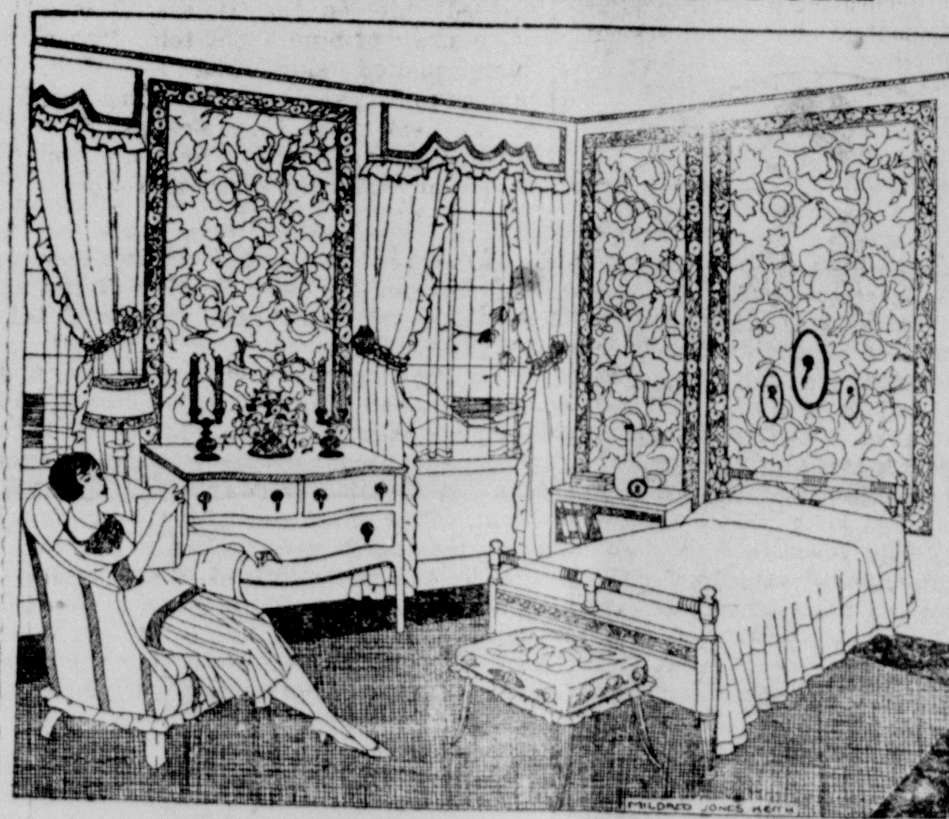

THE convenient built-in is one of the joys of modern house-keeping. Its usefulness may extend even to the bathroom, where a built-in chest should prove a real comfort. For, unless the bathroom is exceptionally large, a chair is often in the way. A closed-in seat may be built across the end of the room, or against some unoccupied wall-space. The top of the seat will serve as a lid to open up the enclosed space.

The interior of the box-seat may be divided into two sections by a partition. These will make receptacles in which to keep those things which are used in the bathroom. One section might hold extra towels, washrags, soap, etcetera, while in the other may be kept soiled towels and other bathroom linen. Such a built-in will prove a great convenience in the servantless home.

The outside of this built-in should be painted to match the woodwork of the bathroom—probably cream, white or a light green. The inside should be painted some light, contrasting color, repeating the dominant note in the bathroom. Closet interiors should never be dark. A good inside color would be sky blue, light yellow, shell-pink or Nile green.

The North Bed Room

Even the Cold North Room May Be Delightful If You Use the Right Wallpaper.

By Agnes Rose

EVERY house has a north side and the unfortunate possessor of the north bed room does not realize its possibilities and suffers in silence, gloom and dreariness that are quite unnecessary. Cheer is a matter of color, and a warm sunny room is delightful because the sunshine brings out all the yellow quality in the colors used, and strengthens those which have no yellow in them. Therefore in the north room we have to use artificial sunshine, that is yellow, in our furnishings; or combinations of yellow with another color such as red, or red, making apricot and orange. If this is done carefully the room will give a semblance of warmth, especially if the warm colors are used in the draperies and bed linen, so that the light at night shades, the source of light, and is reflected by the walls.

In the illustration we have suggested delightful furnishings for such a room. Besides being cheerful, this room was high and barnlike.

To break up the large wall spaces, the decorator had them paneled and covered with the sunniest, cheeriest wallpaper you can imagine. It was a sprightly floral design in blue, green, and apricot on a warm corn-yellow ground. The small border used to outline the panels was a little brighter and cheerier but in the same combination of colors. Each panel was planned to fit a piece of furniture so there were no ugly conflicting lines, but at the same time they were arranged to balance each other so the room was restful and satisfactory.

The dainty, ruffled voile curtains were apricot trimmed with bands of soft green muslin, and the green bedspread and soft green rug made a charming setting for ivory painted furniture. The parchment shade of the room was painted with a gay little design, reminiscent of the wallpaper, and lined with a deeper shade, so that the light at night would reflect yellow or some other cheerful color, and instead of being a gloomy bed room was the most cheerful one in the house.

Scientific Discovery

Oil fields and other valuable mineral deposits may be discovered by measurements of the heat in deep wells, according to geologists.

"There's the Rub"

AMUSEMENTS

Lovers in Quarantine," a Paramount picture starring Bebe Daniels, a clever comedy, presenting a situation in which we find the right bridegroom but the wrong bride and which involves a series of episodes of humor and drama, heads the bill at the Met theater.

The story is a screen version of F. Tennyson Jesse's Broadway stage success, "Quarantine," Bebe playing the role Helen Hays appeared in the play.

Bebe, as Diana Gordon is a mischievous little tomboy who acts first and thinks afterward. She believes desperate situations require desperate remedies and is not the type of girl to give up a man she loves without a good fight for him. The whole plot pivots on the development of this character.

Diana falls in love with Tony Blunt played by Harrison Ford, who imagines himself in love with Diana's flirtatious older sister, Pamela, and plans to elope with her on a steamer. Diana, believing that Tony is really in love with her, thru a clever scheme takes her sister's place on the boat, and it is not for three days that Blunt discovers he has eloped with the wrong girl.

Matters begin to call for fast thinking when the passengers on the ship are all quarantined. Diana and Tony referred to by everyone as "the honeymoon couple" with the girl's spinster chaperone, Amelia Pincent, are assigned a little bungalow apart from the rest. Then the fun begins. It's Bebe's funniest picture—the funniest picture you've seen in months.

SCIENTIST TO HUNT
PORPOISE WITH GUN

Hopes to Get Specimens Off
Florida Coast.

Washington, D. C.—To shoot porpoises as they come into the shallow waters is the unusual aim of a scientific expedition to the Gulf of Mexico, undertaken by Dr. Gerrit S. Miller, Jr., mammalogist of the Smithsonian Institution.

Fishermen of Cedar Keys, Fla., report that herds of this seagoing mammal have a habit of coming into shallow water at low tide. Thus, if they can be shot, the shallowness of the water will prevent their being lost to the hunter.

It is believed the species of porpoise which makes its home along the western shores of Florida has certain distinctive characteristics, about which scientists are not clear. To decide this point is the purpose of Doctor Miller's collecting expedition.

Porpoises are, of course, mammals; that is, they are members of the same large group of animals to which man himself belongs, the distinguishing characteristic of which is that the young of every one of its members must be fed on milk. The porpoise is really a small-toothed whale. Its teeth are peculiar in their shape, which very much resembles an inverted flower bulb. It feeds upon fish and squids. Its sociable and gregarious nature is revealed in its habit of traveling in herds, so frequently seen from ocean liners.

In former times, the porpoise formed a common article of food in England and France, but it is now rarely if ever eaten, being valuable only for the oil obtained from its blubber. Its skin is sometimes used for leather and boot thongs.

Doctor Miller will also do much plant collecting for the national herbarium, which is also under the direction of the Smithsonian. The northwestern section of Florida has been rather neglected by botanists.

Doctor Miller, who has been with the Smithsonian for nearly thirty years, occupies a position in the forefront of his science. It was he who, in 1894, introduced to the British museum the new technique in the study of mammalogy which had been evolved by Dr. C. Hart Merriam, at that time head of the United States biological survey. This new technique has since revolutionized the science of mammalogy throughout the world.

PET MONKEY PROVED
GOOD FIGHTING "MAN"

Nicholas Assis of Pawtucket, R. I., ran a drug store. He also had a pet monkey. One day while his wife was in the store assisting in arranging some of the stock six bold bad men entered and demanded the money in the cash drawer, which amounted to over $50. Mrs. Assis took up her stand beside the cash register and refused to hand over the money. Meanwhile Nicholas Assis was picking up a broom, the only weapon within reach.

When a robber hit the woman on the head, knocking her unconscious, it was more than the monkey could stand and the animal entered the fray, screaming, scratching and biting in the most approved fashion. Once during the fight one of the robbers attempted to crush out the monkey's life by stepping on it but the animal was too quick for him and got revenge later by biting one of its assailant's ears off. Mr. Assis with his broom and pet monkey soon routed the bad men.—Exchange.

Lloyd George as Godfather

Italy is greatly interested in the visit of Mr. Lloyd George. On his round of churches the other day he chanced on a baptism in the baptistry of St. Peter's and stopped to watch the many symbolic rites. The father, recognizing him, nudged his family to look at the war premier, who, much amused, came up and shook hands. Turning to the priest, the father said: "Let the child be called Giorgio instead of Antonio," unaware that the name of the chance godfather was David, a favorite one in Italy. The baby received a handsome present in the course of the day.

EXPOSES WILES OF FAKE STOCK SALESMEN AND PROMOTERS

Latest Methods of Confidence Men Described by American Bankers Association Official—Declares That Shrewder Schemes Than Ever Before Are Taking Peoples' Savings.

By W. R. MOREHOUSE,
Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association.

ARTICLE NO. 1

MUCH of the distress of many people in America today is due, not to the fact that they have not had an opportunity to earn and save money, but to the fact that they have lost their savings in fraudulent schemes of one kind or another. Many a widow is in financial difficulty not because she was left penniless by her husband but because she lost her inheritance by investing it in "gold bricks." Many a bank depositor who once carried a fine balance is penniless today not because he did not know how to save but because he did not know how to invest. Perhaps if I relate some wild-cat promotions that give an insight into the activities of investment sharks it will quicken a relentless determination to provide depositors with much needed advice in investment matters. I have come in personal contact with many cases, some of them almost unbelievable because of the very crookedness of the schemes to defraud, yet thousands of our hard-working savers have been led to invest their savings in these promotions. In giving the high lights of certain cases I am not drawing on my imagination in the least, nor am I relying on hearsay, but giving first-hand information.

Unbelievable but True

Many millions of dollars have been lost in oil. The sum is staggering. Into every corner of the United States the mails carry high-powered sales talk of great riches to be made in oil. Carried away by these promises, depositors quietly withdraw funds from their banks and send them on to wild-cat speculators. Not one out of a hundred has ever recovered the money he invested. Still wild-cat promotions continue to flourish, with a new crop of victims coming up to take the place of those who are forced out of the excitedly back to the derrick, wrench in hand.

"We have drilled to the 'Bell' sand!" the lecturer shouts, bringing cheers from every high-pressure salesman followed by a chorus of voices from the surprised audience. "We can bring in a 5,000 barrel well if we care to, but if we go deeper to sand we can get a 12,000 barrel well!" he adds. "Go on deeper! Go

The Fake Oil Stock Sale Was Opened With Prayer

running because they have already lost their savings.

Listen to this one! It is a typical case. A tract of land, just ordinary land, nothing about it to indicate there is oil beneath the surface. An oil rig, a few tools, half a dozen strings of pipe are close at hand. A large show tent filled with chairs that will seat several hundred people. It is 10 a. m. The sun is shining brightly, and it is a glorious day.

Presently several large busses draw up loaded with people ranging in age from fifty years to eighty. A corps of high-pressure salesmen rush out to greet the arrivals and to assure them that they are most welcome to what will be the next great oil city of America. The aged and feeble minded are tenderly conducted to comfortable chairs under the big tent. In plain view of those seated as they peer out through the flap of the tent stands majestically the oil rig spattered with crude oil and nearby is the big oil sump also filled with oil. Through an ingenious circulating system oil from the sump flows into the well and back into the sump through a pipe in full view.

Religious Revival Methods

Presently the official lecturer calls the meeting to order. The impression he creates is that he is either a minister or has studied for the ministry. He opens the meeting with prayer for the success of the venture in oil. After prayer this sanctimonious gentleman tells how he has invested all of his own earnings and all of his children's savings in the venture, so confident is he that it is to be an oil gusher and all are to be made rich.

He charms his audience with his oratory. He impresses them with his honesty. He calls their attention to oil in plain view, intimating that it is from the well. And while he is painting before them, figuratively speaking, luxury and old age comforts if they invest in the "A-A" Oil Company, the foreman of the rig rushes in, his clothes spattered with crude oil. He is excited and almost out of breath as he reaches the sanctimonious lecturer. A few words are whispered. The lecturer's face registers great delight at the news. He turns back to his audience, a smile of victory on his face. The foreman rushes ily, for the tables are brought in and the big free lunch made ready. As all sit down at least one salesman is at every table. The work cut out for him is to sign up the few who escaped the first "pulling of the net," and you may take my word for it few escape.

One by one these old people, under the spell of being rushed into the deal, pay over their cash, sign notes or turn over good securities for units in the "A-A" Oil Company.

This picture of an oil speculation may seem too crooked to be true, but it is a real story of how thousands of savings depositors, all past the age of fifty, lost over half a million dollars. This story is one of many hundreds that might be told, all of which have ended disastrously for millions of investors.

(Article II will reveal further fraudulent schemes for robbing workers of their savings.)

Truth and Advertising Have Made America Great

Truth in news columns and advertising is the foundation of America's prosperity. Melvin A. Traylor, Second Vice President American Bankers Association, recently said, adding:

"Continuance of our prosperity rests chiefly upon continuation of the greatest of all causes for our present good times—truth in news columns, truth over the store counters and truth in advertising. World-wide acceptance of great discoveries and inventions has been due to the fact that the newspapers truthfully described them and the manufacturers truthfully advertised them. If deceit had been the general rule, if the motto had been 'sell quick and let the buyer beware,' the public would have turned against the new things. I recall one particularly large firm which three years ago began advertising its wares falsely; it is today hopelessly bankrupt.

"Wise advertising costs nothing. You have only to increase the sale of your products to the point that covers the advertising charge to enjoy the enlarged business without cost. The natural saving in overhead is extra profit for dividends or for further expansion."

DESTRUCTION OF GEO. REMUS' LIQUOR DELAYED

Indianapolis, April 16.—(UP.)—Destruction of $300,000 worth of confiscated liquor was ordered delayed by Judge Baltzell in federal court today.

Judge Baltzell directed that the mandate of the circuit court of appeals at Chicago for the destruction of the liquor be held up pending investigation of the disappearance of 350 cases from the store.

Albert Ward, district attorney in charge of the investigation, said it probably would be "thorough and immediate."

The liquor formerly belonged to George Remus, of Cincinnati, and was seized in a raid on the Squibbs distillery at Lawrenceburg, Ind.

TRY US FOR A WANT AD

The Sands of Waikiki
By LOUIS RAYBOLD

IT IS something to be thirty-five and look twenty-six. Even better perhaps than to be an heiress. Anne Lawton was both. Yet she was unmarried and unbetrothed. There had been men—oh, yes, several, but they had worn the lean and hungry look of fortune hunters and she had resolved to remain single rather than to wed for any other reason than love on both sides.

Of course, in addition to these dismissed suitors, there was always George Stanley, who could never be called a fortune hunter because of the fact that he was the owner of the second largest sugar plantation in Hawaii. It was as a member of his party that Anne was now staying at Waikiki, although it was rather through friendship for George's sister than for George himself that she had consented to come, not wishing to raise false hopes in George's ample bosom. To wed George would be to banish the last hope of romance forever. For George was forty and looked fifty.

Anne sat this morning on the beach, lifting the shining sand in handfuls and letting it sift through her fingers. Not far from her a party of bathers had thrown themselves down and Anne watched them idly. A couple of middle-aged women, a slim browned girl, and a clean-limbed, nice looking young fellow—all Americans from the States, judging by their conversation, much of which drifted unavoidably to Anne.

Suddenly she saw one of the women nudge the other, and both looked, as casually as possible, in her direction.

Oh, yes, Anne knew exactly what they were saying. "My dear, that's old Lawton's daughter. Her picture was in the photogravure section Sunday."

Anne could see that the young people weren't especially interested, but the women continued to nudge each other and whisper.

Anne met that evening the most interesting member of that party. The young ensign from the visiting warship in Pearl harbor with whom she had been dancing at the hotel had brought him up and introduced him. Later Anne danced with him three times in succession, and once again before the hop was over, and when they parted he suggested that she call him "Jerry" instead of "Mr. Darlington."

Now two things Anne instinctively recognized. First, that the boy was not the fortune hunting type. Something honest and true shone in his gray eyes. Secondly, that he took her for a girl somewhere around his own age, which she judged might be around the middle twenties.

He represented to her her dream of a fairy prince come true, and when he asked if he might call upon her she gladly permitted him. After that she drove with him to the Pali for the superb view and to Diamond Head for tea at a wayside inn.

One afternoon they had come in from riding the surf and were sunning themselves on the warm sands. Suddenly Jerry frowned. "Joan ought to know better," he said, "than to swim out so far."

"Is Joan your sister?" asked Anne.

"Why, no, what made you think that? Our mothers are old friends. That's all." Then his face cleared. "There she comes now. Fraid I'd have to go after her."

The episode set Anne thinking. Was it possible that she had broken up a love affair between the two? Then she shrugged her slender shoulders. Let the other girl hold Jerry, if she could. If she couldn't, that was her own particular misfortune.

For Anne knew that a proposal hovered on Jerry's lips. And she had already decided upon her answer. Never again, she knew, would youth lay its heart at her feet.

Anne was going to a yacht club dance that night with Jerry. It was during intermission that he led her out to a little balcony hidden from people and sweet with the perfumed Hawaiian night.

"Anne, darling," he began at once. "Anne, darling, I love you. If you—if you don't think I'm too much of a kid."

Anne shivered suddenly. Did Jerry know her age? "You're a dear, anyhow," she said noncommittally.

"I've always maintained," he went on naively, "that people aren't happy where the discrepancy in their ages is too great. And if you're really as much as twenty-five, or even twenty-four, I must seem frightfully young. Yet I'm almost twenty!"

"Twenty—thirty-five!" Anne mentally made the dreadful calculation. It wasn't fair—to feel so young and be so old. It wasn't fair!

"Poor Jerry!" she murmured. "Weighed down with years!" Then lightly she took fortune's gift and flung it to another. I couldn't possibly marry you, dear child. If you think I've led you on, hate me, go back to Joan and let her comfort you."

Next morning she led the amiable George, her host, down to the beach. "Isn't sand wonderful?" she said, letting it sift shingly through her slender fingers. "It's so ageless that age means nothing to it. Nothing. And now," she became brisk and business-like. "If your many offers still hold good, just when would you like me to marry you?"

COUNCIL FIXES GAS RATES

For Next 5 Years—Ordinance Passed By Five To Two Vote At Final Reading.

Gas rates to be charged by the Logan Gas company in Mansfield during the next five years were decided at the special meeting of city council last evening, when the new franchise for the company was passed by a vote of five to two.

Councilmen Harry Berlo and Frank Harbaugh, who have opposed the franchise and rate agreement ordinance, met defeat and went down with their colors flying, literally and in reality. Councilman Walter Underwood who had also been in the ranks of Berlo and Harbaugh, swung over to the side of those who favored the passage and voted 'yea.'

The ordinance was passed as read and no changes were made at the last reading. It will, according to law go into effect on May 12—30 days after its passage. In the interim, rates as allowed by the Ohio State Supreme Court will take effect Tuesday night unless the Logan Gas company wishes to accept the rates as specified in the ordinance immediately.

Councilmen were optimistic over the probabilities of the Logan Gas company accepting the ordinance as passed without any objections but none of them would make a direct statement.

Beginning at midnight Tuesday the rate for gas will be $1 for the first 500 feet and 60 cents per 1,000 feet for all gas used over 500 feet. When the ordinance takes effect the rate will be: For the first two years of the five year period, 95 cents for the first 500 feet, 45 cents per 1,000 for the next 4,500 feet; 50 cents for the next 5,000 feet; 55 cents for the next 5,000 feet and 60 cents for all gas used over 15,000 feet. An additional charge of three cents per 1,000 feet will be made when the bill is not paid within the ten-day period after the rendering of the bill.

The rate for the next three year period will be: $1 for the first 500 feet and 60 cents for all gas used over 500 feet. The three-cent penalty also applies to this rate.

Monday night when the president of the council, Charles A. Moore, ordered the clerk, William Carter, to call the roll and receive the votes of the members on the ordinance, Councilman Berlo halted the proceedings a few seconds while he removed a small American flag from his pocket. Waving it Berlo declared 'well, if you are going to pass it then we will go down with our colors flying eh, Frank?'

This injected a sense of humor and caused a round or two of hearty laughter.—Mansfield (O.) News.

Where Line Is Drawn

"What do you understand by the phrase 'Senatorial courtesy'?" "It's a reminder," answered Senator Sorghum, "that we leading legislators are assembled for the purpose of expressing our candid and conscientious opinions of everything on earth except one another."—Washington Star.

Disastrous Consequences

It cost Mr. Neerman very little to buy the mottoes, and he hoped that they would have the same effect on his employees as if he had raised their salaries.

So it happened that on Monday morning there appeared above every desk the words, "Do it now!" framed with an embossed gift border.

But, alas! They took the advice too literally.

Next day the typist eloped with the bookkeeper, three clerks asked for a raise, the cashier took a holiday with the contents of the safe, and the office boy became a highwayman, holding out till Thursday before he was caught and disarmed.

Poets and Due Bills

A letter which Edgar Allan Poe wrote apologizing for his inability to repay a loan of $50 has just been sold at auction for $500. This is ten times the amount of the original loan. The heirs of the creditor were given a chance for a handsome realization, even if they had to wait a century. It is good business to keep the due bills from poets, after all. The poet is another animal that is worth more dead than alive.—Los Angeles Times.

Toolmaker to the World

The United States exports of hardware and allied products have increased in the first nine months of 1925 about 10 per cent over 1924 with a total export of $50,000,000. Exports of abrasives, tools and cutlery showed substantial increases.—Good Hardware.

Effectiveness in Grace

If you have a thrust to make at your friend's expense, do it gracefully. It is all the more effective. Some one says the reproach that is delivered with hat in hand is the most telling.—Haldibarten.

The statue of Hans Sachs, recently unveiled in Nuremberg, Germany, is said to be the only statue ever erected to the honor of a cobbler. Sachs was the Meister singer about whom Wagner composed his great opera.

China clings to its ancient method of dividing up the day, which differs from our western way. Instead of reckoning 24 hours to the day, the Chinese divide it into 12 parts, each of 2 hours.

MANY CALLERS EXPOSITION OF BETTER HOMES

All Expressed Delight at the Completeness and Beauty
of the Dwelling.

The Better Homes exposition held at the "House Beautiful" Sunday afternoon and evening, was a big success for hundreds of people called and all were pleased with the handsomely appointed and furnished home. In the receiving line were Mrs. D. V. Courtwright, Mrs. J. L. Young, Mrs. Christian Schwarz, Mrs. Lawrence Johnson, Misses Jeaneette Rowe, May Lowe, Carrie Olds and Emily Yates. The suffragets were presented with carnations and the other fellows, received a greeting, accompanied by a smile.

The house which showed a complete layout of a furnished home, possibly a little more elaborate, than a newspaper man can afford, but the ordinary mortal, such as a plasterer or a brick layer, or people like plumbers, painters and wallpaper hangers could own.

The home is so complete that one would not know or think what to add. The furnishings are not so elaborate, but that the ordinary person could buy them for his better half. Possibly he would have to go along without a new topcoat or straw pile, this spring, but by a little economy, he could get along by buying a new dining room or bedroom outfit, and ride in the old gasoline wagon of 1925 vintage.

On entering the House Beautiful you are ushered into the living room, which is a dream. It is furnished with overstuffed, upholstered taupe colored mohair furniture from Stevenson's. The floor covering is a 9x12 Florentine Axminster rug, also in taupe. The windows are hung in a heliotrope shade of silk and window seat and cushions are of silk with a shade of lighter color, which made a pretty combination. The Crist Department store was responsible for the artistic ensemble. The mahogany Windsor chairs and rockers came from Stevenson's.

The candlesticks and bonbon dish, in front of the Stevenson etched mirror, came from O. D. Mader's. The Seth Thomas eight day clock on the mantel with its hands before its face came from Sensenbrenner's and it keeps time.

A magazine holder from Mader's stands in front of a fireplace which contains a bronze gas heater furnished by Ed Crist and nearby is a Stewart-Warner radio set on a stand, kindly loaned by Barrere & Nickerson. There are so many of these radios in town that it is useless to say that they are popular. While we were there, some fellow over in Chicago, who thought we had not been to church, radioed his sermon, which was very good.

Just off to one side of the fireplace is the stairway and on the first landing is a telephone stand and a honest-to-goodness telephone is all hooked up by the Citizens' Telephone company and 35 is the number of the House Beautiful. On the east wall of the living room is a beautiful piece of tapestry furnished by the Graham Millinery store.

The dining room is just east of the living room and the floor covering is an exquisite design Axminster rug. This and the window draperies were furnished by the Moeller dry goods store. The dining room furniture came from Mason Brothers store. The china closet, which is a built in affair, was all dolled up for the occasion with a dinner outfit of Minton china, silverplate, cut glass and a beautiful coffee service. An exquisite flower plate, occupied the center of the dining table, and it made a hit. This and all the dishes, glassware and silver plate was exhibited by Mader's.

The kitchen floor covering, a congoletum rug and the window draperies were furnished by Moeller's dry goods store. The kitchen table by Mason Brothers, steel range by Edward Crist dishes, garbage can and waste paper basket by Mader's; Hoover electric sweeper by Barrere & Nickerson; refrigerator and kitchen utensils by Crist Brothers.

The basement was chosen by Barrere & Nickerson to display their wonderful Maytag electric washing machine, together with galvanized wash tubs on stands, mop buckets and mops in fact, a complete laundry outfit. The bugbear of every household in washing, and this is made play by Maytag. Ask Barrere & Nickerson.

As you ascend the stairway to the upper floors, you will find a well lighted hallway. The floor is covered by a Brussels runner, furnished by the Crist department store. The bathroom is at the head of the stairs

Nut-Fed Porkers

The principal food of the wild or semi-wild pigs of Cuba is the palmiche—the nut of the royal palm. This nut is almost as rich in carbohydrates as corn. Pork fed on palmiche is the favorite meat of all Latin America.

HOOPULOA HAWAIIAN TOWN WIPED OUT OF EXISTENCE

A Flood of Molten Rock pouring Out From the Crater Struck the Sea Sunday Morning, Causing the Ocean To Boil Furiously, the Eruption Is One of the Grandest Sights Imaginable--From the Sea, the Whole Earth Seems To Be On Fire.

tain presented a most gorgeous picture.

Viewed from the ocean the upper half of the flow appeared to be a molten river, which burst at different points into lakes of fire, sending up an incandescent glow of tremendous beauty.

At 3 o'clock Sunday morning a new outbreak appeared on the Kau side of the mountain, two distinct actions being visible.

PERSONALS

The village of Hoopuloa, on the southwest shore of the Island of Hawaii, was destroyed Sunday morning by an avalanche of lava, that burst from the volcano Mauna Loa.

From 10 to 15 homes were engulfed, but there is no report as to what became of the inhabitants.

A flood of molten rock pouring from the crater struck the sea at 6:21 o'clock Sunday morning, starting the water boiling several hundred feet out at sea.

Plunging into the water south of Hoopuloa, the lava turned in the direction of Kona, filling the bay and burying the landing and from 10 to 15 homes located in the vicinity.

All houses and the wharf at Hoopuloa were engulfed under 50 feet of lava, the postoffice being the last building to go. It burst into flames at 8:30 a. m.

As the steam of lava, which flowed from an 8,000 foot level in approximately four days, approached the ocean Sunday afternoon it split into two branches. Eight hundred feet from water one stream turned toward Hoopuloa and the other started in the direction of Milolii.

Old Hawaiian Kahunas started incantations in the ancient form of appeal to Pele (Hailan goddess associated with the volcano Kilauea) not to destroy their homes.

Their appeal failed to stop the flow. A steady onrush of lava continued its course of destruction.

Army airplanes arrived a few hours after the village was destroyed, but were unable to locate the flow definitely because of the dense steam and smoke.

The aviators reported the heat was intense at an elevation of 3,000 feet. Huge clouds of steam hung over the ocean, rising to a height of several hundred feet. As the lava struck the water tremendous rockets of steam shot into the air, showering the entire region about the bay.

The heat of the superheated flow had been hovering above the village for more than 36 hours.

Sunday night a heavy flow from the mountain stirred the great pile of cooling slag into action and the giant moved forward over the village and into the ocean.

The village of Milolii is believed to be safe.

Hoopuloa was one of the few typically Hawaiian villages remaining in the islands. It comprises a cluster of from 10 to 15 homes of the old Hawaiian style, numbering a population of approximately 100 persons.

Several hundred passengers aboard steamer Haleakala, Island of Hawaii, gazed in awe while the great volcano, Mauna Loa, rising into the clouds from the Island of Hawaii, belched forth a fiery river of lava. As the vessel cruised along the south coast, the flow down the slopes of the mountain

EVANGELISTIC SERVICES AT CALVARY END

Last Meeting of Series This Evening at 7:15--Everybody is Invited.

A wonderful sermon was delivered by Rev. Charles A. Glass at Calvary Evangelical church Sunday morning, on "The Grand Purpose to be Kept in View."

"Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

This is a rule by which we should seek to be governed. I want to give you three reasons this morning why we should earnestly seek to live by this rule. In the first place because the individual who is careless or indifferent even to the slightest degree will fail to live that kind of life that God would have lived and yet you know that the age in which we live is an age of indifference with reference to spiritual things and this awful spirit of indifference has crept within the very pales of the church.

The individual who will not be governed by this rule will find two or three things necessary. He will find it necessary very often to make a self-examination.

Then you will find it very, very necessary to consult the "Guide Book." We must get acquainted with the chart. You know what I mean, don't you? I mean the Bible. There are three means by which we will be wonderfully helped in our lives. The first is by personal reading. Oh, that we might be daily readers of His word. We should be in a Sunday school class to become acquainted with God's word. It is a wonderful means to help us understand the Bible.

The greatest means by which any one will understand what God's word really teaches; it is thru the preached word. The preaching service is the main service of the church. God has chosen men to whom He has spoken and made them realize that they must lay aside other ambitions and that their business life should be preaching, and that He would give them messages. He wants His people to hear.

Then the individual who will be governed by this rule will find it necessary to earnestly, anxiously and frequently be engaged in prayer. You will never amount to anything until you are a praying person. Do you have family prayer? Your home will never be the kind of home God would have it be unless you have family prayer.

Let us try to be living examples of what God's people really should be. We should adopt this as a rule by which to be governed because the individual who lives according to this rule will compel all who know him, and all who watches him, to know that the grace of God is true.

Rev. Glass will be with us only tonight. He will conduct a special service of story and song. The first part of the program will be composed of musical numbers, both vocal and instrumental, piano and violin. The latter part of the evening he will give a lecture "Light in the Darkness" which is an interesting and helpful story of his life. Everybody come at 7:15 to the Evangelical church.

TONSILS REMOVED.

Sherman Furniss underwent an operation for the removal of his tonsils Tuesday, April 6. The operation was performed by Dr. C. G. Stewart, assisted by Dr. F. E. Ginder.

Single Dish Dinners Become Popular With the Housewife

One-dish dinners have suddenly loomed into prominence with the housewife. The idea of single-dish dinners is not new. They have been recognized institutions since Eve lived in the Garden of Eden. The modern woman has merely revived an old practice.

Historically, the first single-dish repast was the apple Adam ate. According to Charles Lamb, one of the most famous one-dish dinners was provided back in prehistoric times when fire attacked the hut of a primitive gentleman and provided roast pig.

Whether this be true or not, the one-dish dinner is a great time saver for the housewife. Naturally, however, the home manager requires even more variety in her single-dish dinners than she does in her regular meals. It was with the idea of assisting her in this connection that the following carefully tested recipes were evolved:

Tuna Fish Pie

1 twelve ounce can tuna fish
1 cup celery cut in fine pieces
1 cup diced potato cubes
2 hard cooked eggs
3 tbsp. flour
4 tbsp. butter
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. pepper
1/2 cup water
2 chicken bouillon cubes
1/2 cup evaporated milk

Put butter and onion in a sauce pan and cook for two minutes. Add the flour, salt, pepper, water, and bouillon cubes. Stir until sauce boils and add the evaporated milk. Put into a buttered casserole alternating with tuna fish, celery, potato and hard cooked eggs, sliced. Cover with tiny, uncooked baking powder biscuits and bake in a 425° F. oven for fifteen to twenty minutes.

Ham a la Breck

1 pint cooked macaroni
1 cup cold ham, finely chopped
1/2 cup evaporated milk
1/2 cup onion juice
1/2 cup mustard
1/2 cup water
1/2 cup celery
1/2 cup salt
1/2 cup pepper
1/2 cup onion juice
1/2 cup mustard

Cover bottom of a buttered baking dish with a layer of cooked macaroni. Cover with finely chopped ham and repeat. Mix diluted milk with slightly beaten eggs, salt, pepper, onion juice and mustard and pour over ham and macaroni. Bake in a 350° F. oven until firm. Lamb, beef, or chicken may be used instead of the ham.

Lima Beans with Vegetables

2 cups dried lima beans
1 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. pepper
2 inch cube fat salt pork
1 small onion, sliced
1 cup carrots, cubed
1/2 cup potatoes, cubed
2 tbsp. butter
3 cups water

Soak beans over night in cold water; drain, put in bean pot and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Chop salt pork and cook in a frying pan until fat is tried out, add onion, carrots and potatoes and stir constantly until vegetables are delicately browned. Add to beans, and add butter and water. Cook in a 350° F. oven until beans are tender. Add more water if it boils away.

Scalloped Meat and Spinach

3/4 lb. melted butter
2 tbsp. flour
1 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. pepper
1 cup evaporated milk
1 cup buttered crumbs
1/2 cup evaporated milk diluted with 1/2 cup chicken or meat stock
1 pint cooked spinach
1 pint cooked chicken

Remove outside edge of fat from ham. Cut fat in small pieces and put in the bottom of a casserole. Lay ham on bottom, then pile potatoes on top. Pour enough diluted milk over to be seen through the potatoes. Cover and bake slowly about one and one-half hours in a 300° F. oven.

Melt butter, add flour, salt, pepper, and diluted milk. Stir until sauce boils, then add the 1/2 cup of evaporated milk and stir until boiling point is reached. Into a buttered casserole put a layer of cooked spinach, then a layer of cooked chicken cut in medium-sized pieces. Cover with the milk sauce. Repeat and cover with buttered crumbs. Bake until heated through and crumbs are brown.

Meat Pie with Potato Crust

1 cup cooked meat, diced
1/2 cup celery
1/2 cup evaporated milk diluted with 1/2 cup water
1/2 cup evaporated milk
1/2 cup butter
1/2 cup flour
2 cups mashed potato
1 egg yolk
Salt
Pepper

Make a white sauce of the butter, flour and diluted milk. Combine the meat, celery, and white sauce, add seasonings, and pour into a shallow baking dish. Spread potato over the mixture. Brush surface of potato with egg yolk diluted with 1/2 cup evaporated milk. Bake in a hot oven until heated through and a delicate brown.

Chow Mien

1 lb. noodles
1/2 cup celery
1 young onion
1 egg beaten
1/2 cup Chinese Sauce
1 tsp. salt
Fat for frying noodles
1/2 cup stock (meat or chicken)
1/2 cup bamboo shoots
1/2 lb. raw pork or chicken
1/2 cup drippings
1 tsp. flour

Cut bamboo shoots, onion, and celery into long threads and meat or chicken into slender strips. Fry egg in oiled pan and cut into long strips. Place noodles on a rack of the steamer, sprinkle with 2 tbsp. oil, cover and let steam for 15 minutes. Lift carefully with a fork to separate well. Spread on a platter to cool, then fry in hot fat until crisp. Drain well and place on a hot platter. Have ready the other ingredients, which have been prepared in the following way. Fry the pork gently without browning in the drippings for about 15 minutes. Stir occasionally. Add the celery, bamboo shoots, salt, and Chinese sauce. Cover and let steam for 15 minutes. Mix the flour with the stock and pour over the vegetables and meat, add more water if necessary. Cook two minutes and spread over the hot fried noodles and decorate the top with egg strips.

Scalloped Ham and Potatoes

1 slice ham, two inches thick
2 cups potatoes, pared and thinly sliced
1/2 cup evaporated milk diluted with 1/2 cup water
1/2 cup water

Remove outside edge of fat from ham. Cut fat in small pieces and put in the bottom of a casserole. Lay ham on bottom, then pile potatoes on top. Pour enough diluted milk over to be seen through the potatoes. Cover and bake slowly about one and one-half hours in a 300° F. oven.

Choosing the Right Bedroom Colors

By Capitola W. Ashworth

MUCH thought and care should be expended upon the decoration of bedrooms. For it is not an easy task to achieve a setting which is quietly restful without being depressing, and at the same time cheerful without being too gay. It is to our sleeping-rooms that we retire in search of repose and relaxation. To obtain those results, the nerves should not be excited by brilliant color nor the spirits lowered by a sombre environment.

Also, a bedroom should express to a certain extent the personality which is to occupy it. There should always, for instance, be a marked distinction between the scheme of decoration planned for a man's room, and that which is to serve the purpose of a feminine occupant. Simplicity in furnishings and an appearance of solid comfort should characterize the man's bedroom, while lady's boudoir may indulge in more delicate fabrics and a greater daintiness of color and design.

Two bedrooms typically masculine are shown in the upper left and lower right-hand corners of the accompanying illustration. As will be observed, the furniture is plain and substantial, built for use and comfort. A cheerful color-scheme is appropriate in these rooms. In the first, the large wicker chair is painted a Chinese red, and the rest of the furniture light tan decorated with lines of Chinese red. The cushions of the chair are covered with tan cretonne figured in black and Chinese red. The walls of this room are painted a pale, quiet tan, and the woodwork brown. In the second of the men's bedrooms, the wicker armchair, painted a deep, French blue, goes well with the beautifully finished mahogany furniture, in a setting of pale grey walls, mahogany-finished doors and woodwork. In the oval, hooked rug on the painted floor, blue is the predominating color. Brighter colors in the lampshade give a touch of warmth.

Furniture painted in the lovely pastel shades is suitable for women's bedrooms. That in the upper right-hand picture is painted orchid, with stencil design in turquoise blue; while the stuffed armchair is covered with flowered chintz in the same colors. The built-in bookcases match the woodwork, probably cream or white.

The furniture in the other feminine bedroom is painted blue and decorated with narrow gold stripes. The paneled walls are painted a paler blue and cream. Paint is not only the most sanitary finish for bedroom walls and floors, but also the most effective background for furniture, draperies and pictures.

Spraying Trees in Bloom Harms Bees

Little Insects Necessary for Pollination.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When spraying fruit trees, care should be taken to do the work at a time when there is the least danger of poisoning the honeybees which visit the blossoms and which are very necessary for the pollination of the flowers, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Spraying fruit trees while in full bloom with arsenicals is particularly injurious to bees, according to tests which have been completed recently by the bureau of entomology.

Of course the beekeeper does not want his bees poisoned, says the department, because as a result his honey crop is reduced. The subject should be of even more interest, however, to fruit growers because with the loss of the honeybees they lose the most effective means of pollination in their orchards. In this respect the beekeeper, the fruit grower, and in fact everyone is benefited by honeybees.

The effect of arsenical sprays on the mortality of honeybees has long been debated, but only a few systematic investigations have been made to aid in settling the dispute. In the hope of answering definitely some of the questions so long debated, these tests were conducted. While they are limited in their scope, they do enable the department to make some recommendations.

Spraying apple trees during full bloom is not recommended because the codling moth can be as well controlled by spraying when 90 per cent of the petals have fallen, and because spraying when the trees are in bloom is injurious to insect pollinators.

Acid Phosphate Speeds Up Tomato Crop Growth

It has been found by the New Hampshire experiment station that acid phosphate speeds up the tomato crop materially, and makes it possible to beat the frost. They have used from five hundred pounds to fifteen hundred pounds of acid phosphate to the acre. In addition to twenty tons of manure, and the acid phosphate has advanced the peak of the crop better than manure alone, or other chemical fertilizers. According to the reports the bulk of the crop has matured from one to two weeks earlier on the acid phosphate plot.

Apparently the acid phosphate causes rapid early growth, and as a result of this a much larger number of blossom clusters, blossoms, and fruit is produced early. There is apparently no difference in the rapidity of the development of the fruit from the time the blossoms are formed until ripening occurs, but the fact that there is blossom in abundance from a week to two weeks earlier is sufficient to enable the grower to get the majority of the tomatoes off the vines before frost.

It will not cost much to treat some of your tomatoes with the acid phosphate, and it might work out to great advantage.

Hogging Off Field Peas and Corn Is Profitable

Hogging-off trials resulted in returns of $18.65 per acre from Canadian field peas and $37.76 per acre from corn last year at the Edgeley substation, according to a report made by Superintendent O. A. Thompson to P. F. Trowbridge, director of the North Dakota experiment station. The return was considered especially good in view of the fact that the field peas were badly damaged by unfavorable weather during May and June.

The average daily gain per hog for 129 hogs was 1.16 pounds on the peas, 6.22 acres furnishing pasture for eight days. The hogs were then turned in a ten-acre corn field, where they made a daily average gain of 1.7 pounds each for 17 days. The value of the gains was computed at 10 cents per pound.

Woolen Materials
for New Garments*Chic Frocks and Wraps Are Built of Dainty Lightweight Weaves.

When spring comes and all things are new, women begin the ever-diverting search for fresh inspiration in dress. It is not always simple to discover novelty, nor is the response to one's efforts always immediate. This is particularly evident when a radical change in styles is just finding adjustment.

Many of the most successful styles of the present season, writes a fashion authority in the New York Times, are adaptations of extremes brought out previously. There is little that is startlingly different in line, but colors and materials are new.

Two years ago women were saying that they could not find a woolen dress in New York, meaning, of course, one of authoritative style. The craze for thin fabrics, crepes, voiles and so on was at its height. Paris was seeking to achieve the supple and lithe silhouette with a certain fragile daintiness, and America followed blindly.

Gradually American appreciation of the fitness of things called for wool for autumn, winter and spring and simultaneously the French couturiers swung over to the same conviction in creating gowns, suits and wraps for out-of-doors. There is always a certain demand for English materials for sports wear, travel and general utility, but it is too limited and individual to have any bearing upon the general trend of fashions. A compromise between these and the flimsy stuffs was sought, and this season it is to be found in the great variety of beautiful products of the looms.

Many Costumes Offered.

Parisian fashion artists have never before offered so many costumes for the street, for sports and informal wear, coats, capes and odd garments made of woolen or part woolen materials. Quantities of frocks and wraps are built of the newest weaves, which are much lighter in weight than heretofore, but nevertheless wool. Tweed is tremendously popular for suits and top coats and for separate skirts. Nothing is more satisfying for sports clothes. Molyneux and Redfern are doing some stunning things in tweed, which is shown this season in entirely new surfaces, particularly in color. These are quite different from the natural and neutral shades in the wool with which we have long been familiar.

Lanvin, stepping wide of her favorite territory, picture costumes, has conceived a striking ensemble for early spring that will find many friends among the elite on this side of the water. The material is tweed in one of the latest patterns, a diagonal stripe in brown and white zig-zag lines. It has a plain wrap-around skirt and full, straight coat, seven-eighths length. Navy blue velvet is used for the jumper and for three large buttons that trim one side of the skirt. Bands of skunk fur trim the collar and cuffs.

Another decorative pattern in tweed has a geometric background, with stripes wide apart. Lanvin shows it in a swager little two-piece suit. The double-breasted hip length jacket, made of this, is to be worn with a skirt of finely plaited black wool rep.

Reps in many degrees of weight, size of rib, color and quality, brought out last season and presented in delightful variants by American manufacturers, are much liked by French designers. One model delightfully adapted to early spring is a one-piece frock of black rep. It has the general character of the coat-dress, so popular two seasons ago and here and there of a detail to bring it up to the minute. From one shoulder to the hem this particular design fastens in a straight line, broken only at one point below the waist by a battlement fastening, below which the skirt flares at one side. A scarf is draped around the neck to form the collar. It is caught on one shoulder with a gilded flower. Narrow gilt braid is used to finish the edge of the entire frock.

This use of braid in metal, colored silk or wool is fashionable. It gives a smart finish to any of these simply tailored woolen or worsted frocks. A particularly popular finish is a narrow strip of gilt or silver leather, added in the manner of braid on collar and cuffs, as a belt or to join and outline any of the new spring frocks and informal coats.

Kasha Is Liked.

Another material established in past seasons is kasha. It improves on acquaintance, because of the fine texture of the latest weaves. In some of the best styles shown from both French and American designers kasha is combined with another material. Coats for motoring and general sports wear are made of kasha, self lined.

Covert, twill and kasha jersey are among the important weaves from domestic looms, also a few of the "English" mixtures. These are the fabrics best liked for frocks and suits. For capes, top coats and cape coats, except in models for evening and more elaborate dress, there are cashmere and homespun in square patterns, rough woolens, "nubbed" tweeds, stripes, plaits and checks.

What is known as the occasional garment is shown in many interesting models. Much that is chic and fascinating is included in the little dress described as the jumper frock. This phase of the fashionable costume is not disdained by the most illustrious among the couturiers. They have entertained themselves by designing many that are original and artistic. One done by Paul Poiret has made a decided "hit" on the Riviera. It is a naive affair of blue kasha toile with a finely plaited skirt and a slip-on jumper that is severely plain and high at the neck, with long sleeves. It is finished with clusters of fine tufts on the collar, cuffs, shoulders and around the bottom.

Another French creator has made a stunning little smoking jacket of white suede. It meets high at the neck, and has no fastening down the front except three large buttons below the waist. It is cut straight in line, with three pockets, and is worn with a short flaring skirt of white flannel. A narrow belt of colored suede, attached at each side of the coat, buckles in the center of the back. Lanvin goes in for these odd jumpers and unusual combinations. Her favorite is the sleeveless jumper, with kilt skirt and large silk tie.

Of the new materials, frisca is most prominent. Some of the most stylish frocks and ensembles worn at the southern resorts are made of this material. A charming model that will have an appeal for summer in the country is a cape costume of frisca. The simple frock has a two-tiered skirt, simple, untrimmed blouse with bateau neck, and a three-quarter circular cape. Black velvet ribbon forms the belt and ties the cape at the throat. This is an exception in the season's color catalogue, since white is considered less fashionable than the pastel shades, for elaborate dress, and the richer tones, for tailored clothes.

The novelty in wool patterns is the check. The traditional check in black and white is much used and is always smart. But the newest checks are small and irregular, producing an effect of subtlety in their softly blended colors. Red, brown and ivory are woven together in equal spaces. In one, quite different, beige, blue and scarlet are spaced to produce oblong bars, the blue appearing to form a stripe. A small geometric pattern woven in gray and black is original and particularly attractive.

In recent exhibitions of American made silks the most admired of all the new patterns were the small polka dots. Of these the choicest were in black and white. All of this proves the enduring popularity of black and white. One of the most exclusive shops in New York is showing a great deal of blue.

The Chinese Flapper

The Chinese flapper is not as attractive as the term might seem to imply for her garb is a hybrid arrangement which is neither one thing or the other. She has positively discarded the trousers which has been the traditional garb for centuries and wears instead a long full skirt. The Chinese headress is retained, but she is able to put on any of the other features of the Occidental girl that she can obtain. The result is a garbled appearance which is sometimes ridiculous.

A Chest for the Bathroom

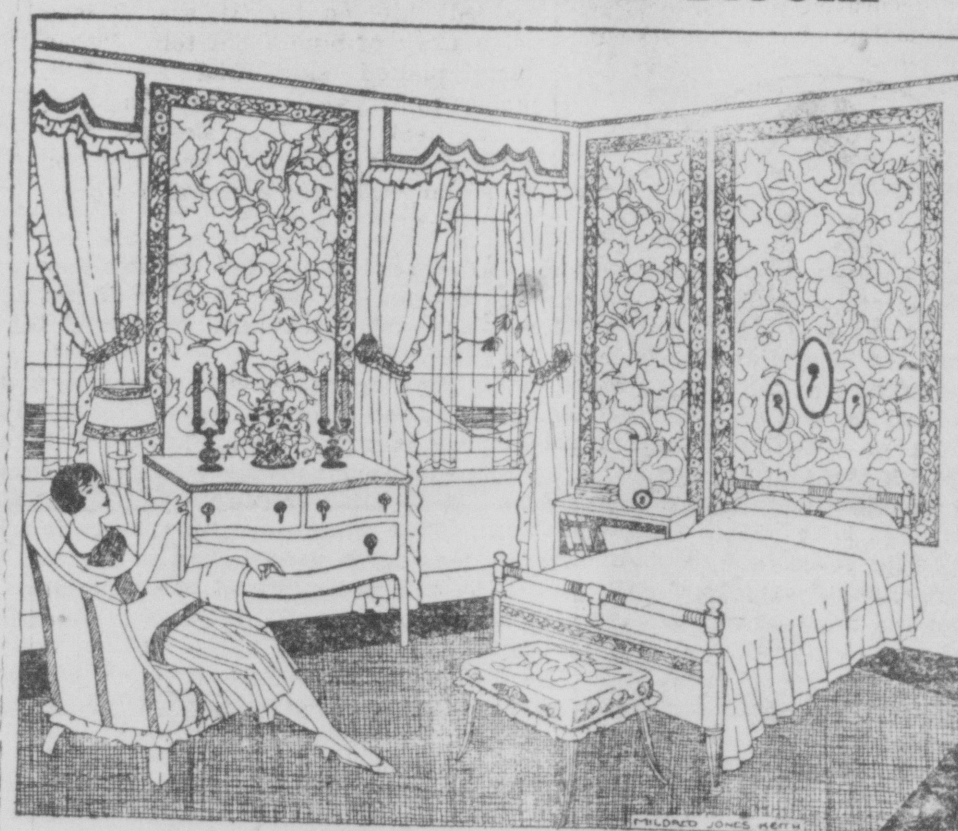

THE convenient built-in is one of the joys of modern house-keeping. Its usefulness may extend even to the bathroom, where a built-in chest should prove a real comfort. For, unless the bathroom is exceptionally large, a chair is often in the way. A closed-in seat may be built across the end of the room, or against some unoccupied wall-space. The top of the seat will serve as a lid to open up the enclosed space.

The interior of the box-seat may be divided into two sections by a partition. These will make receptacles in which to keep such things which are used in the

The outside of this built-in should be painted to match the woodwork of the bathroom—probably cream, white or a light green. The inside should be painted some light, contrasting color, repeating the dominant note in the bathroom. Closet interiors should never be dark. A good inside color would be sky blue, light yellow, shell-pink or Nile green.

The North Bed Room

Even the Cold North Room May Be Delightful If You Use the Right Wallpaper.

By Agnes Rose

EVERY house has a north side and the unfortunate possessor of the north bed room does not realize its possibilities and suffers in silence, gloom and dreariness that are quite unnecessary. Cheer is a matter of color, and a warm sunny room is delightful because the sunshine brings out all the yellow quality in the colors used, and strengthens those which have no yellow in them. Therefore in a north room we have to use artificial sunshine, that is yellow, in our furnishings; or combinations of yellow with another color such as red, or red, making apricot and orange. If this is done carefully the room will give a semblance of warmth, especially if the warm colors are used in the draperies and linens, shades, the source of light, and reflected by the walls.

In the illustration we have suggested delightful furnishings for such a room. Besides being cheerful, this room is high and barnlike, giving one in the house.

To break up the large wall spaces, the decorator had them paneled and covered with the sunniest, cheeriest wallpaper you can imagine. It was a sprightly floral design in blue, green, blue and apricot on a warm corn-yellow ground. The small border used to outline the panels was a little brighter and richer but in the same combination of colors. Each panel was planned to fit a piece of furniture so there were no ugly conflicting lines, but at the same time they were arranged to balance each other so the room was restful and satisfying.

The dainty, ruffled voile curtains were apricot trimmed with bands of soft green muslin, and the green bed spread and soft green rug made a charming setting for ivory painted furniture. The parchment shade was painted with a gay little devil, reminiscent of the wallpaper, and lined with a deeper shade, so that the light at night was warm and glowing. The use of warm colors made every light reflect yellow or some shade of it, and instead of being a cold room this bed room was the most cheerful in the house.

AMUSEMENTS

Lovers in Quarantine," a Paramount picture starring Bebe Daniels, a clever comedy, presenting a situation in which we find the right bridegroom but the wrong bride and which involves a series of episodes of humor and drama, heads the bill at the Met theater.

The story is a screen version of F. Tennyson Jesse's Broadway stage success, "Quarantine," Bebe playing the role Helen Hays appeared in the play.

Bebe, as Diana Gordon is a mischievous little tomboy who acts first and thinks afterward. She believes desperate situations require desperate remedies and is not the type of girl to give up a man she loves without a good fight for him. The whole plot pivots on the development of this character.

Diana falls in love with Tony Blunt played by Harrison Ford, who imagines himself in love with Diana's flirtatious older sister, Pamela, and plans to elope with her on a steamer. Diana, believing that Tony is really in love with her, thru a clever scheme takes her sister's place on the boat, and it is not for three days that Blunt discovers he has eloped with the wrong girl.

Matters begin to call for fast thinking when the passengers on the ship are all quarantined. Diana and Tony referred to by everyone as "the honeymoon couple" with the girl's spinster chaperone, Amelia Pincet, are assigned a little bungalow apart from the rest. Then the fun begins. It's Bebe's funniest picture—the funniest picture you've seen in months.

SCIENTIST TO HUNT PORPOISE WITH GUN

Hopes to Get Specimens Off Florida Coast.

Washington, D. C.—To shoot porpoises as they come into the shallow waters is the unusual aim of a scientific expedition to the Gulf of Mexico, undertaken by Dr. Gerrit S. Miller, Jr., mammalogist of the Smithsonian Institution.

Fishermen of Cedar Keys, Fla., report that herds of this sea-going mammal have a habit of coming into shallow water at low tide. Thus, if they can be shot, the shallowness of the water will prevent their being lost to the hunter.

It is believed the species of porpoise which makes its home along the western shores of Florida has certain distinctive characteristics, about which scientists are not clear. To decide this point is the purpose of Doctor Miller's collecting expedition.

Porpoises are, of course, mammals; that is, they are members of the same large group of animals to which man himself belongs, the distinguishing characteristic of which is that the young of every one of its members must be fed on milk. The porpoise is really a small-toothed whale. Its teeth are peculiar in their shape, which very much resembles an inverted flower bulb. It feeds upon fish and squids. Its sociable and gregarious nature is revealed in its habit of traveling in herds, so frequently seen from ocean liners.

In former times, the porpoise formed a common article of food in England and France, but it is now rarely if ever eaten, being valuable only for the oil obtained from its blubber. Its skin is sometimes used for leather and boot things.

Doctor Miller will also do much plant collecting for the national herbarium, which is also under the direction of the Smithsonian. The northwestern section of Florida has been rather neglected by botanists.

Doctor Miller, who has been with the Smithsonian for nearly thirty years, occupies a position in the forefront of his science. It was he who, in 1894, introduced to the British museum the new technique in the study of mammalogy which had been evolved by Dr. C. Hart Merriam, at that time head of the United States biological survey. This new technique has since revolutionized the science of mammalogy throughout the world.

PET MONKEY PROVED GOOD FIGHTING "MAN"

Nicholas Assis of Pawtucket, R. I., ran a drug store. He also had a pet monkey. One day while his wife was in the store assisting in arranging some of the stock six bold bad men entered and demanded the money in the cash drawer, which amounted to over $50. Mrs. Assis took up her stand beside the cash register and refused to hand over the money. Meanwhile Nicholas Assis was picking up a broom, the only weapon within reach.

When a robber hit the woman on the head, knocking her unconscious, it was more than the monkey could stand and the animal entered the fray, screaming, scratching and biting in the most approved fashion. Once during the fight one of the robbers attempted to crush out the monkey's life by stepping on it but the animal was too quick for him and got revenge later by biting one of its assailant's ears off. Mr. Assis with his broom and pet monkey soon routed the bad men.—Exchange.

Lloyd George as Godfather

Italy is greatly interested in the visit of Mr. Lloyd George. On his round of churches the other day he chanced on a baptism in the baptistry of St. Peter's and stopped to watch the many symbolic rites. The father, recognizing him, nudged his family to look at the war premier, who, much amused, came up and shook hands. Turning to the priest, the father said: "Let the child be called Giorgio instead of Antonio," unaware that the name of the chance godfather was David, a favorite one in Italy. The baby received a handsome present in the course of the day.

EXPOSES WILES OF FAKE STOCK SALESMEN AND PROMOTERS

Latest Methods of Confidence Men Described by American Bankers Association Official—Declares That Shrewder Schemes Than Ever Before Are Taking Peoples' Savings.

By W. R. MOREHOUSE,
Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association.

ARTICLE NO. 1

MUCH of the distress of many people in America today is due, not to the fact that they have not had an opportunity to earn and save money, but to the fact that they have lost their savings in fraudulent schemes of one kind or another. Many a widow is in financial difficulty not because she was left penniless by her husband but because she lost her inheritance by investing it in "gold bricks." Many a bank depositor who once carried a fine balance is penniless today not because he did not know how to save but because he did not know how to invest. Perhaps if I relate some wild-cat promotions that give an insight into the activities of investment sharks it will quicken a relentless determination to provide depositors with much needed advice in investment matters. I have come in personal contact with many cases, some of them almost unbelievable because of the very crookedness of the schemes to defraud, yet thousands of our hard-working savers have been led to invest their savings in these promotions. In giving the high lights of certain cases I am not drawing on my imagination in the least, nor am I relying on hearsay, but giving first-hand information.

Unbelievable but True

Many millions of dollars have been lost in oil. The sum is staggering. Into every corner of the United States the mails carry high-powered sales talk of great riches to be made in oil. Carried away by these promises, depositors quietly withdraw funds from their banks and send them on to wild-cat speculators. Not one out of a hundred has ever recovered the money he invested. Still wild-cat promotions continue to flourish, with a new crop of victims coming up to take the place of those who are forced out of the excitedly back to the derrick, wrench in hand.

"We have drilled to the 'Bell' sand!" the lecturer shouts, bringing cheers from every high-pressure salesman followed by a chorus of voices from the surprised audience. "We can bring in a 5,000 barrel well if we care to, but if we go deeper to the 'Meyer' we can get a 12,000 barrel well!" he adds. "Go on deeper! Go

From American Bankers Association Journal

The Fake Oil Stock Sale Was Opened With Prayer

running because they have already lost their savings.

Listen to this one! It is a typical case. A tract of land, just ordinary land, nothing about it to indicate there is oil beneath the surface. An oil rig, a few tools, half a dozen strings of pipe are close at hand. A large show tent filled with chairs that will seat several hundred people. It is 10 a. m. The sun is shining brightly, and it is a glorious day.

Presently several large busses draw up loaded with people ranging in age from fifty years to eighty. A corps of high-pressure salesmen rush out to greet the arrivals and to assure them that they are most welcome to what will be the next great oil city of America. The aged and feeble minded are tenderly conducted to comfortable chairs under the big tent. In plain view of those seated as they peer out through the flap of the tent stands majestically the oil rig spattered with crude oil and nearby is the big oil sump also filled with oil. Through an ingenious circulating system oil from the sump flows into the well and back into the sump through a pipe in full view.

Religious Revival Methods

Presently the official lecturer calls the meeting to order. The impression he creates is that he is either a minister or has studied for the ministry. He opens the meeting with prayer for the success of the venture in oil. After prayer this sanctimonious gentleman tells how he has invested all of his own earnings and all of his children's savings in the venture, so confident is he that it is to be an oil gusher and all are to be made rich.

He charms his audience with his oratory. He impresses them with his honesty. He calls their attention to oil in plain view, intimating that it is from the well. And while he is painting before them, figuratively speaking, luxury and old age comforts if they invest in the "A-A" Oil Company, the foreman of the rig rushes in, his clothes spattered with crude oil. He is excited and almost out of breath as he reaches the sanctimonious lecturer. A few words are whispered. The lecturer's face registers great delight at the news. He turns back to his audience, a smile of victory on his face. The foreman rushes rily, for the tables are brought in and the big free lunch made ready. As all sit down at least one salesman is at every table. The work cut out for him is to sign up the few who have escaped the first "pulling of the net," and you may take my word for it few escape.

One by one these old people, under the spell of being rushed into the deal, pay over their cash, sign notes or turn over good securities for units in the "A-A" Oil Company.

This picture of an oil speculation may seem too crooked to be true, but it is a real story of how thousands of savings depositors, all past the age of fifty, lost over half a million dollars. This story is one of many hundreds that might be told, all of which have ended disastrously for millions of investors.

(Article II will reveal further fraudulent schemes for robbing workers of their savings.)

Truth and Advertising

Have Made America Great

Truth in news columns and advertising is the foundation of America's prosperity, Melvin A. Traylor, Second Vice President American Bankers Association, recently said, adding:

"Continuance of our prosperity rests chiefly upon continuation of the greatest of all causes for our present good times—truth in news columns, truth over the store counters and truth in advertising. World-wide acceptance of great discoveries and inventions has been due to the fact that the newspapers truthfully described them and the manufacturers truthfully advertised them. If deceit had been the general rule, if the motto had been 'sell quick and let the buyer beware,' the public would have turned against the new things. I recall one particularly large firm which three years ago began advertising its wares falsely; it is today hopelessly bankrupt.

"Wise advertising costs nothing. You have only to increase the sale of your products to the point that covers the advertising charge to enjoy the enlarged business without cost. The natural saving in overhead is extra profit for dividends or for further expansion."

DESTRUCTION OF GEO. REMUS' LIQUOR DELAYED

Indianapolis, April 16.—(UP.)—Destruction of $300,000 worth of confiscated liquor was ordered delayed by Judge Baltzell in federal court today.

Judge Baltzell directed that the mandate of the circuit court of appeals at Chicago for the destruction of the liquor be held up pending investigation of the disappearance of 350 cases from the store.

Albert Ward, district attorney in charge of the investigation, said it probably would be "thorough and immediate."

The liquor formerly "belonged to George Remus, of Cincinnati, and was seized in a raid on the Squibbs distillery at Lawrenceburg, Ind."

IT IS something to be thirty-five and look twenty-six. Even better perhaps than to be an heiress. Anne Lawton was both. Yet she was unmarried and unbetrothed. There had been men—oh, yes, several, but they had worn the lean and hungry look of fortune hunters and she had resolved to remain single rather than to wed for any other reason than love on both sides.

Of course, in addition to these dismissed suitors, there was always George Stanley, who could never be called a fortune hunter because of the fact that he was the owner of the second largest sugar plantation in Hawaii. It was as a member of his party that Anne was now staying at Waikiki, although it was rather through friendship for George's sister than for George himself that she had consented to come, not wishing to raise false hopes in George's ample bosom. To wed George would be to banish the last hope of romance forever. For George was forty and looked fifty.

Anne sat this morning on the beach, lifting the shining sand in handfuls and letting it sift through her fingers.

Not far from her a party of bathers had thrown themselves down and Anne watched them idly. A couple of middle-aged women, a slim browned girl, and a clean-limbed, nice looking young fellow—all Americans from the States, judging by their conversation, much of which drifted unavoidably to Anne.

Suddenly she saw one of the women nudge the other, and both looked, as casually as possible, in her direction.

Oh, yes, Anne knew exactly what they were saying. "My dear, that's old Lawton's daughter. Her picture was in the photograph section Sunday."

Anne met that evening the most interesting member of that party. The young ensign from the visiting warship in Pearl harbor with whom she had been dancing at the hotel hop brought him up and introduced him. Later Anne danced with him three times in succession, and once again before the hop was over, and when they parted he suggested that she call him "Jerry" instead of "Mr. Darlington."

Now two things Anne instinctively recognized. First, that the boy was not the fortune hunting type. Something honest and true shone in his gray eyes. Secondly, that he took her for a girl somewhere around his own age, which she judged might be around the middle twenties.

He represented to her her dream of a fairy prince come true, and when he asked if he might call upon her she gladly permitted him. After that she drove with him to the Pali for the superb view and to Diamond Head for tea at a wayside inn.

One afternoon they had come in from riding the surf and were sunning themselves on the warm sands. Suddenly Jerry frowned. "Joan ought to know better," he said, "than to swim out so far."

"Is Joan your sister?" asked Anne.

"Why, no, what made you think that? Our mothers are old friends. That's all." Then his face cleared. "There she comes now. 'Fraid I'd have to go after her."

The episode set Anne thinking. Was it possible that she had broken up a love affair between the two? Then she shrugged her slender shoulders. Let the other girl hold Jerry, if she could. If she couldn't, that was her own particular misfortune.

For Anne knew that a proposal hovered on Jerry's lips. And she had already decided upon her answer. Never again, she knew, would youth lay its heart at her feet.

Anne was going to a yacht club dance that night with Jerry. It was during intermission that he led her out to a little balcony hidden from people and sweet with the perfumed Hawaiian night.

"Anne, darling," he began at once. "Anne, darling, I love you. If you—if you don't think I'm too much of a kid."

Anne shivered suddenly. Did Jerry know her age? "You're a dear, anyhow," she said noncommittally.

"I've always maintained," he went on naively, "that people aren't happy where the discrepancy in their ages is too great. And if you're really as much as twenty-five, or even twenty-four, I must seem frightfully young. Yet I'm almost twenty!"

"Twenty—thirty-five!" Anne mentally made the dreadful calculation. It wasn't fair—to feel so young and be so old. It wasn't fair!

"Poor Jerry!" she murmured. "Weighed down with years!" Then lightly she took fortune's gift and flung it to another. I couldn't possibly marry you, dear child. If you think I've led you on, hate me, go back to Joan and let her comfort you."

Next morning she led the amiable George, her host, down to the beach. "Isn't sand wonderful?" she said, letting it sift shingly through her slender fingers. "It's so ageless that age means nothing to it. Nothing. And now," she became brisk and business-like. "If your many offers still hold good, just when would you like me to marry you?"

COUNCIL FIXES GAS RATES

For Next 5 Years—Ordinance Passed By Five To Two Vote At Final Reading.

Gas rates to be charged by the Logan Gas company in Mansfield during the next five years were decided at the special meeting of city council last evening, when the new franchise for the company was passed by a vote of five to two.

Councilmen Harry Berlo and Frank Harbaugh, who have opposed the franchise and rate agreement ordinance, met defeat and went down with their colors flying, literally and in reality. Councilman Walter Underwood who had also been in the ranks of Berlo and Harbaugh, swung over to the side of those who favored the passage and voted 'yea.'

The ordinance was passed as read and no changes were made at the last reading. It will, according to law go into effect on May 12—30 days after its passage. In the interim, rates as allowed by the Ohio State Supreme Court will take effect Tuesday night unless the Logan Gas company wishes to accept the rates as specified in the ordinance immediately.

Councilmen were optimistic over the probabilities of the Logan Gas company accepting the ordinance as passed without any objections but none of them would make a direct statement.

Beginning at midnight Tuesday the rate for gas will be $1 for the first 500 feet and 60 cents per 1,000 feet for all gas used over 500 feet. When the ordinance takes effect the rate will be: For the first two years of the five year period, 95 cents for the first 500 feet, 45 cents per 1,000 for the next 4,500 feet; 50 cents for the next 5,000 feet; 55 cents for the next 5,000 feet and 60 cents for all gas used over 15,000 feet. An additional charge of three cents per 1,000 feet will be made when the bill is not paid within the ten-day period after the rendering of the bill.

The rate for the next three year period will be: $1 for the first 500 feet and 60 cents for all gas used over 500 feet. The three-cent penalty also applies to this rate.

Monday night when the president of the council, Charles A. Moore, ordered the clerk, William Carter, to call the roll and receive the votes of the members on the ordinance, Councilman Berlo halted the proceedings a few seconds while he removed a small American flag from his pocket. Waving it Berlo declared 'well, if you are going to pass it then we will go down with our colors flying eh, Frank?'

This injected a sense of humor and caused a round or two of hearty laughter.—Mansfield (O.) News.

STANLEY M. NOGGLE RECEIVES SERIOUS INJURIES IN WRECK

Stanley M. Noggle, of Circleville, who is employed as a painter by the Shaeffer & Ark Company, of this city, received severe internal injuries, last evening when the car which he was driving collided with the car belonging to Superintendent H. S. Deffenbaugh of the Stoutsville public schools, near the Crumley farm, on the Amanda road. Neither Mr. Deffenbaugh, wife or daughter were injured but Noggle's two women companions received painful cuts and bruises. After the cars had tangled wheels the Noggle car plunged through a fence. The coupe that Noggle was driving was the property of Robert Newman of the L. E. Huddle Paint Shops. The car was pulled to the Huddle garage about 1:30 this morning for repairs.—Lancaster Eagle.

LOANS UP TO $500.00.

Well-meaning folks, not accustomed to business affairs, sometimes prefer to lose their belongings or neglect their rights, rather than go to the trouble of protecting themselves. The popular imagination assumes that there is a lot of red tape about business generally, and that when it comes to borrowing money, the job is a tough one and involves a lot of trouble.

It is really no trouble at all—just a matter of simple business, easy to understand, easy to get and easy to pay back—in fact, these are exactly the things that make the loan service of The City Loan so popular. Here is a modern building and loan system, geared to meet the money needs of the ordinary man in amounts that are within his means and at terms to match. An inquiry at our office (no expense) should convince you.

phrase 'Senatorial courtesy'?" "It's a

Disastrous Consequences

It cost Mr. Neerman very little to buy the mottoes, and he hoped that they would have the same effect on his employees as if he had raised their salaries.

So it happened that on Monday morning there appeared above every desk the words, "Do it now!" framed with an embossed gift border.

But, alas! They took the advice too literally.

Next day the typist eloped with the bookkeeper, three clerks asked for a raise, the cashier took a holiday with the contents of the safe, and the office boy became a highwayman, holding out till Thursday before he was caught and disarmed.

Poets and Due Bills

of abrasives, tools and cutlery showed substantial increases.—Good Hard-

MANY CALLERS EXPOSITION OF BETTER HOMES

All Expressed Delight at the Completeness and Beauty
of the Dwelling.

The Better Homes exposition held at the "House Beautiful" Sunday afternoon and evening, was a big success for hundreds of people called and all were pleased with the handsomely appointed and furnished home. In the receiving line were Mrs. D. V.
Courtright, Mrs. J. L. Young, Mrs.
Christian Schwarz, Mrs. Lawrence
Johnson, Misses Jeaneette Rowe, May
Lowe, Carrie Olds and Emily Yates.
The suffragets were presented with carnations and the other fellows, received a greeting, accompanied by a smile.

The house which showed a complete layout of a furnished home, possibly a little more elaborate, than a newspaper man can afford, but the ordinary mortal, such as a plasterer or a brick layer, or people like plumbers, painters and wallpaper hangers could own.

The home is so complete that one would not know or think what to add.
The furnishings are not so elaborate, but that the ordinary person could buy them for his better half. Possibly he would have to go along without a new topcoat or straw pile, this spring, but by a little economy, he could get along by buying a new dining room or bedroom outfit, and ride in the old gasoline wagon of 1925 vintage.

On entering the House Beautiful
you are ushered into the living room, which is a dream. It is furnished with overstuffed, upholstered taupe colored mohair furniture from Stevenson's. The floor covering is a 9x12 Florentine Axminster rug, also in taupe. The windows are hung in a heliotrope shade of silk and window seat and cushions are of silk with a shade of lighter color, which made a pretty combination. The Crist Department store was responsible for the artistic ensemble. The mahogany Windsor chairs and rockers came from Stevenson's.

The candlesticks and bonbon dish,
in front of the Stevenson etched mirror, came from O. D. Mader's. The Seth Thomas eight day clock on the mantel with its hands before its face came from Sensenbrenner's and it keeps time.

A magazine holder from Mader's stands in front of a fireplace which contains a bronze gas heater furnished by Ed Crist and nearby is a Stewart-Warner radio set on a stand, kindly loaned by Barrere & Nickerson.
There are so many of these radios in town that it is useless to say that they are popular. While we were there, some fellow over in Chicago, who thought we had not been to church, radioed his sermon, which was very good.

Just off to one side of the fireplace is the stairway and on the first landing is a telephone stand and a honest-to-goodness telephone is all hooked up by the Citizens' Telephone company and 35 is the number of the House Beautiful. On the east wall of the living room is a beautiful piece of tapestry furnished by the Graham
Millinery store.

The dining room is just east of the living room and the floor covering is an exquisite design Axminster rug.
This and the window draperies were furnished by the Moeller dry goods store. The dining room furniture came from Mason Brothers store. The china closet, which is a built in affair, was all dolled up for the occasion with a dinner outfit of Minton china, silverplate, cut glass and a beautiful coffee service. An exquisite flower plate, occupied the center of the dining table, and it made a hit.
This and all the dishes, glassware and silver plate was exhibited by Mader's.

The kitchen floor covering, a con-goleum rug and the window draperies were furnished by Moeller's dry goods store. The kitchen table by Mason Brothers, steel range by Edward Crist dishes, garbage can and waste paper basket by Mader's; Hoover electric sweeper by Barrere & Nickerson; refrigerator and kitchen utensils by Crist Brothers.

The basement was chosen by Barrere & Nickerson to display their wonderful Maytag electric washing machine, together with galvanized wash tubs on stands, mop buckets and mops in fact, a complete laundry outfit. The bugbear of every household is the washing, and this is made play by the Maytag. Ask Barrere & Nickerson.

As you ascend the stairway to the upper floors, you will find a well lighted hallway. The floor is covered by a Brussels runner, furnished by the Crist department store. The bathroom is at the head of the stairs
